

I am interested in what I earn,
I am interested in my growth.

- Ratan Tata

Very few people are successful in leading an organisation to global success and creating a great reputation for themselves in pursuit of that leadership. They also inspire millions in the same and one of those people is India's beloved and respected Industrialist and philanthropist, Ratan Tata.

Ratan Tata was born on 28 December 1937. He began his career at Tata Steel as an apprentice in 1962 and rose to become its Chairman in 1991 - a position he held till 2012. He served the Tata Group in different capacities and steered the Group companies to flourish and gain competitive ground in the wake of liberalization, globalization and privatisation that incidentally coincided with his tenure as chairman of most iconic of India's corporate houses with legacy of over 150 years. "Great works are performed, not by strength, but by perseverance". You must do what you believe is right, what you think is right, many time people will say many things to you, they will say wrong to you. Maximum time people will not support you, very few will support you, But if you believe that what you are doing is right, then you must go for it even if it is tough.
